Nootropics, also commonly referred to as "smart drugs", are drugs that are claimed to improve human cognitive abilities. Nootropics are used to improve memory, concentration, thought, mood, learning, and many other things. Some nootropics are now beginning to be used to treat certain diseases such as attention-deficit hyperactivity disorder, Parkinson's disease, and Alzheimer's disease.

There is general consensus in the pharmaceutical industry that poorly water-soluble drug candidates are becoming more prevalent (Lipinski et al., 1997, Lipinski, 2000). If a drug candidate has reasonable membrane permeability then often the rate-limiting process of absorption is the drug dissolution step.

The Biopharmaceutics Classification System is a system to differentiate the drugs on the basis of their solubility and permeability.. This system restricts the prediction using the parameters solubility and intestinal permeability. The solubility classification is based on a United States Pharmacopoeia (USP) aperture. The intestinal permeability classification is based on a comparison to the ...
