An artificial neural network is a network of simple elements called artificial neurons, which receive input, change their internal state (activation) according to that input, and produce output depending on the input and activation. The network forms by connecting the output of certain neurons to the input of other neurons forming a directed, weighted graph.

Failure mode and effects analysis (FMEA)â€™also "failure modes", plural, in many publicationsâ€™was one of the first highly structured, systematic techniques for failure analysis. It was developed by reliability engineers in the late 1950s to study problems that might arise from malfunctions of military systems. A FMEA is often the first step of a system reliability study.

Falls can be devastating to the affected individual, yet a common event and hence one of the major causes of injury or disability within the aged population in Malaysia and worldwide.

Smartphone Based Data Mining for Fall Detection: Analysis

ABSTRACT. Big Data has emerged in the past few years as a new paradigm providing abundant data and opportunities to improve and/or enable research and decision-support applications with unprecedented value for digital earth applications including business, sciences and engineering.

Figure 4 shows the four stages of the prediction process for the four models. First, the input and output data are prepared and processed by removing the outlierâ€™s data; second, the four models parameters are developed using training data set and evaluated using testing data set.
